TERROIR

Deep clay-limestone soils.

WINEMAKING

Harvesting takes place exclusively in the morning, between 4am and 9am, to preserve all the aromatic freshness of the Floréal. The grapes are then pressed and settled to obtain a clear, limpid juice. Vinification is a two-stage process:

First, alcoholic fermentation in the liquid phase at low temperature to retain sugar. At the end of alcoholic fermentation, once the desired density has been reached, tangential filtration is carried out to stop fermentation and retain the desired sugar content. After filtration, the partially fermented juice is transferred to a vat for the second fermentation, known as the prise de mousse (formation of carbon dioxide and fine bubbles). Once fermentation is complete, the natural sparkling wine can be bottled.

VARIETAL Floréal
